SYRIANS BLAME THE BISHOP.

ASK THE POLICE TO SAVE THEM FROM VIOLENCE.

Talk in the Quarter That the Rev. Raphael Hawaweeny Has Called a Meeting to Avenge Newspaper Criticisms-Only a Peaceful Gathering, So He Says.

New York's Syrian quarter is in a state of more than usual unrest. Many men prominent in the picturesque little colony are marked for slaughter, so the gossip of the neighborhood runs, and persons who once walked abroad without fear now take to the middle of the street and give a wide berth to alleys and darkened hallways.

A committee sent to Police Commissioner McAdoo yesterday a petition asking for protection. In the little restaurants where the merchants gather to eat queer dishes and to sip aarak strangers are looked upon askance. So far no one has been killed, no one molested, but to all intents and purposes war is waging.

The cause of all this trouble is the Rev. Raphael Hawaweeny, Bishop of the Orthodox Greek Church in Pacific street, Brooklyn. The New York Syrians declare that the Bishop has incited his followers to rise against the lawloving, peaceful residents of lower Washington street and that certain residents of that section are in danger.

of lower Washington street and that certain residents of that section are in danger. This is how it all came about, according to the gossips of the quarter: Syrian newspapers, they say, will accept for publication almost any article, provided money accompanies the request for publicity. Lately there have appeared in certain Syrian papers paragraphs that reflected upon the character of well known Syrians. The men attacked protested, and most of the papers consented to discontinue the columns devoted to covert attacks upon persons.

The Bishop took a hand in the crusade, but there were those who said that his place was in the church. One paper called him to account for his conduct. It was said that the Bishop was inciting members of the orthodox church to arise against those who did not embrace his faith.

Then, it is said, the Bishop called a meeting is told in the Well. I'll be hanged, said Tightly, and he could get no further.

"Well, I'll take you anywhere you want to go."

"We chugged around to various points of interest within the corporation limits, not neglecting the ivrigation stations, when some one suggested that we take a run out to a roadhouse. The driver knew just the place that would suit us, and he took us there.

"His judgment proved to be excellent. The place was A No. 1. We liked it so well that finally we began to order wine.

"Up to that time we had been content with the driver touched the bell.

"Another bottle, please, he said to the waiter, and not quite so cold this time."

"Well, I'll be hanged, said Tightly, and he could get no further.

"Well, I'll be hanged, said Tightly, and he could get no further.

"Well, it is said, the Bishop called a meeting is told in the waiter, and not quite so cold this time."

"His take you anywhere you want to of interest within the corporation limits, not neglecting the ivrigation stations, of interest within the corporation limits, not neglecting the ivrigation stations. The tight we have sayed and up to take the lake a voice was A No. 1. We liked it so

What happened at the meeting is told in the petition that was sent yesterday to the Police Commissioner. There it is set forth that the Bishop said that he had been attacked and that when he was assalled the honor of those who followed him was likewise assailed. At this meeting, the petition says, the Bishop declared that his morals had been attacked and that, if the charges were true he was unfit to be a priest and all the marriages which he had performed were invalid.

It is a Syrian custom, the petition says.

at your service any time you happen to be in Syracuse."

"When Tightly reported we took the card to the hotel desk and asked the clerk if he knew the owner.

"'Know him?' he replied. 'Why, every one in this town knows him. He is one of the richest men in Syracuse.'

"When we told of our experience the clerk laughed.

"'Just like him.' he said, 'but wait till his wife catches him. She was calling on some friends here and he was waiting to take her home when you struck him. She had to finish her journey in a cab.'" formed were invalid.

It is a Syrian custom, the petition says, when one enlists in a cause, to go before a priest, lay down his weapons and swear that he will devote his life to avenging the wrong.

The story goes on to say that half a dozen young men, headed by one upon whose head there is a price in Syria, placed their knives in front of the Bishop and took an oath that they would die for him.

That's the version of the disturbed leaders of the colony on this side of the bridge. They worried and worried, and at last, with the help of Charles Le Barbier, former Assistant District Attorney, a petition

They worried and worried, and at last, with the help of Charles Le Barbier, former Assistant District Attorney, a petition asking for police interference was drawn up. N. N. Maloof, an importer, of 17 Broadway, was chairman of the committee signing the petition.

The big sergeant behind the desk of the Church street police station last night smiled at the idea of bloodshed, and said that no extra police had been placed in the Syrian quarter, though the men on post had been told to exercise vigilance.

Bishop Hawaweeny said last night that he had not incited his people to riot. "There is in New York," he continued. "a Turkish society known as Jamiat-Al-Addh. The literal translation of that is "Thampagne Glass Society." Its members do not like me because I would not indorse certain ideas of theirs, and they attacked me in the columns of a newspaper called Al Hoda. On Wednesday of this week members of my congregation met in the basement On Wednesday of this week members of my congregation met in the basement of St. Nicholas Church, of which I am in charge, and expressed their indignation at the slurs cast upon me. There was no display of arms and no one vowed to avenge the wrongs that had been done me.

"I am surprised that any one should believe that I would countenance anything unchristian. It is absurd. I am the Bishop of the Orthodox Greek Church in America and my paths do not lead me into politics."

and my paths do not lead me into politics."

The Bishop was told that several Syrian merchants had declared that they had received threatening letters since the meeting in the Brooklyn church.

"If that is so," said he, "I cannot imagine who wrote them."

'I've got one of my own. Mary's got one, too."

It ought, perhaps, to again be stated that the returned sojourner's veracity is not open to question. He added:

"Controlling my inclination to laugh in the shopkeeper's face, I remarked:

"Of course, I wouldn't presume to ask you to sell me your own or Mary's shirt, much less request the loan of either. I find that I have come to this town without a shirt to sleep in, and I desire to huy one."

A SERUM CURE FOR HAY FEVER.

GERMAN SCIENTIST ABATES DIS-EASE WITH ANTITOXIN.

One Drop Brings Relief in Half an Hour and 50 Grains Carries a Sufferer Through a Whole Season-Discoverer Upholds Pollen Theory of the Disease.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.-Details conerning the new cure for hay fever have been transmitted to the Department of Commerce and Labor by Consul-General Guenther, at Frankfort, Germany. The preparation has been named "pollantine" by its inventor, Prof. W. F. Dunbar, direcor of the State Hygienic Institute at Ham-

It is an antitoxin prepared by inoculating a horse with the toxic pollen of flowers and using the serum obtained from the horse's blood. At first the cure was effected horse's blood. At first the cure was effected by subcutaneous injections, which were used with considerable success for some time, but rendered the patient immune for not longer than one or two weeks. Recently in the course of experiments Prof. Dunbar found that a drop of the serum applied to the inner surface of the nose would oure the inflammation in half an hour, or if applied to the eve would an hour, or if applied to the eye would reach the nose through the lachrymal

The remedy is now used almost entirely The remedy is now used almost entirely in that way, and has proved so efficacious that it has been placed upon the market in Germany. A further improvement is the pulverizing of the remedy, in which form it is not susceptible to bacteriological decomposition. In its powdered form, however, it irritates the mucous membrane and it must be dissolved in sugar of milk when used.

and it must be dissolved in sugar of milk when used.

The quantity necessary to carry a patient through a whole hay fever season was found not to exceed fifty grains. The success of the remedy is shown in the statistics collected by Dr. Luebbert of Leipsig, where out of 505 patients treated 299, or 59.2 per cent., of those who used it were entirely free from attacks during the whole hay fever period. One hundred and forty-59.2 per cent. of those wind deed it wells entirely free from attacks during the whole hay fever period. One hundred and forty-three of the patients used the remedy with partial success, while sixty-three received no benefit from its use.

During a series of lectures on hay fever before the Hufeland Society, Prof. Dunbar, discussing the cause of hay fever, showed by his experiments that it was due to pollen. He confirmed the fact that pollen toxin was a tox-albumin. He proved that a single grain of pollen contained enough toxin to produce intense irritation in very sensitive hay fever patients, clearly showing, he declared, that the objection that grains of pollen could not be the cause of hay fever on account of their scarcity in the atmosphere was entirely without foundation.

During hay fever time, that is, during During hay fever time, that is, during the flowering time of the grasses, immense amounts of efficient pollen had been found in the air. As the result of experiments in that line it had been found that up to four millions could be deposited upon one square meter within twenty-four hours.

Most people are not susceptible to the influence of pollen toxin, but for hay fever patients it was an extremely strong acting polson, they being affected by even the most minute quantities. The American brand of hay fever Prof. Dunbar attributes to the pollen of ragweed and goldenrod. PIANOS AND ORGANS.

They Have a Batch of Their Own Believe in Them Implicity.

"Ball players are as superstitious as chorus girls," said the business manager of one of the American League clubs. "In addition to all the ordinary superstitions, they've got a whole batch of their own, and they believe in them implicitly. "They all fall for the thirteen superstition You can't get them to ride in a bus in which there are only thirteen men, and they are always very careful to count noses, too. "In the dining rooms of some of the hotels at which the players stop while traveling they put all the players at one table. It's fun to watch them flagging the thirteenth fellow who comes along to the table for a meal. If he doesn't roll his eye around himself and count the bunch before sitting down, there are always plenty of them at the table who will, and if the newcomer makes the thirteenth he ducks out of the dining room until he is joined by one of the other players, to make the fourteenth, or waits till one of the eaters gets through and quits the "Most teams are superstitious about having outsiders on the bench, even during practise. Few of them believe that they can win a game when an outsider has sat on their bench from the moment that they arrived at the park." "But the kinky superstitions of the individual players make the queer stuff. I wouldn't go so far as to say that every player has some odd little pet notion, but it's a sure thing that not many of them are free from these whimsies.

from these wnimsies,

"I know several pitchers, for instance,
who thoroughly believe that when a game is postponed on account of rain or wet grounds on the day they're due to go in it's simply impossible for them to win on the next day or the next time they take their postponed turn.

"There's often a plain enough answer to the superstitions of the players, but they won't see the answer, and just go right on nursing the superstition. For example, there's a renowed outfielder who is positive that a court limb ha rives himself a view that tive that every time he gives himself a slight tut with his razor while shaving in the morning he's going to muli an easy fly at the game in the afternoon.

"Now, it seems to me that that's easily enough, explained. When he cuts himsnows that he's in a nervous state, perhaps due to excessive traveling or incautious eating, and he's still nerous when he muffs his easy fly during the game. But you'd never be able to make that outfielder see the connection. He simply knows that the razor cut presages the muff, and that's all there is to it so far as his understanding of the situation is concerned.

all there is to it so far as his understanding of the situation is concerned.

"One of the best backstops in fast company has a deady horror of a left hand barber. He has himself shaved every morning right after breakfast, and, as happens three or four times on the average during the season, when he finds he's being scraped by a left hand barber he relapses into the most profound melancholy for the remainder of the day. He solemnly affirms that he never yet in the course of sixteen years of playing caught a game on such a day that he didn't make a holy show of himself by performing miserably and piling up a stack of passed balls.

"Another first fate catcher has the superstition that when, in the progress of a game, he picks up his mask after having thrown it off to go after a foul, and involuntarily tries to put the mask on upside down, his team is just naturally bound to lose the game, no matter how big a lead the team may have at the time.

"I understand that women consider it lucky to get one or both of their stockings on wrong side out accidentally, but I know a ball player—one of the crack first basemen—who becomes pale when he finds miss an easy out in the afternoom's game, and nothing will ever make him believe to the contrary.

"The great macrity of players believe that it's bad luck to pick up any bat but their own when going up to the plate. They always have bats that look alike notched or otherwise fixed up for easy identification, so that they won't pick up the wrong one, to do which they believe is to make dead sure that they'll be whiffed by the pitcher. Only when you see a batsman about to go up pick up two bats and swing them around can you be sure that he isn't possessed of this superstition.

"Some batsmen that I could mention have achieved the reputation of being swell waiters—that is, of being exceptionally patient in waiting for the good ones with the first one, no matter how perfect it is, because they absolutely believe that it's out of the question for them to put the first one, in a safe place."

"I know one player who parries the out being struck a dozen times, yet succeeded in bases after having the says that he' have says that he' he being hit. Direct stition is that the best kind of I his by the pitcher "Plenty of the believe that whe tablecloth at brave bad luck of follow, and they in the player who are simply the victims of a superstition. "It looks like dangerous business, but his success at it seems to justify him. He always looks, when he's up, as if he were trying to work the pitcher, but as a matter of fact he's simply burning incense to his pet superstition.

"Another hitter of high degree has got the idea firmly imbedded in his head that after he's put two or more foul tips out of the lot he's bound to make a swell hit. He's got the aversione of verse to roll.

"Another player with a swell batting eye thoroughly believes that it is positively necessary for him to bite off a fresh chew of tobacco every time he goes up. He says that he has never yet succeeded in making a hit when he inadvertently overlooked this.

"A superstition of one of the top notch third basemen is that it is the vilest kind of bad luck to join the bunch of players that surround a man who gets hurt in the progress of a game. The fans have noticed for years back that this third baseman always sits on his sack at such a time in-
